CHARLES-TOWN, Aug. 26.

WE are aſſured, by a Letter from a Gentleman of Diſtinction in Philadelphia (who has alſo ſent the following authentic Copy of a Letter from Governor Johnſtone, one of the Britiſh Commiſſioners, to a Member of Congreſs) "That a Gentleman in Philadelphia, a Member of Congreſs, a few Days after the Commiſſioners had left that City, was offered by a Perſon judged by them to be a proper Agent, Ten thouſand Guineas and any Poſt or Office in America he ſhould ask, provided he would uſe his influence and endeavours to accompliſh a Reconciliation between Great Britain and America upon terms ſhort of Independence. This was introduced by a long artful and flattering previous Converſation, in which [his Majeſty] the King of England's Name was uſed, in order to give Weight to the infamous Propoſition, which the Gentleman treated with proper Contempt. The Public may rely upon the Truth of this intimation, and it is very probable they will ſhortly ſee the whole Tranſaction fully diſplayed."

Philadelphia, June 26, 1778.

[Private.]

DEAR SIR,

I Came to this country, in a ſincere belief, that a reconciliation between Great-Britain and America could be eſtabliſhed, on terms honourable and beneficial to both. I am perſuaded, and can prove, that the laſt treaty with France ſhould be no bar, and the firſt treaty, if ever you ſaw it, an inducement.—Suppoſing every obſtacle to prevent us from treating removed, we are then to conſider, whether the terms propoſed are advantageous. I incloſe you my ſentiments on the ſubject at large; if they concur with yours, we ſhould join in the work with all the prudence, and all the means poſſible and virtuous. I believe, the men who have conducted the affairs of America incapable of being influenced by improper motives: But in all ſuch tranſactions there is a riſk, and I think that whoever ventures, ſhould be ſecured, at the ſame time that Honour and Emolument ſhould naturally follow the fortune of thoſe who have fleeced the veſſel in the ſtorm, and brought her ſafely to port. I think Waſhington and the Preſident have a right to every Favour that grateful Nations can beſtow, if they could once more unite our Intereſts and ſpare the Miſeries and Deva[illegible] of war.

I wiſh above all Things to ſee you; and I hope you will ſo contrive it. Do not think Great Britain ſo low. Remember ſhe can never be lower than you was at Trenton. It is the ſame Blunderers who produced the war, who have conducted it. When the Senſe of the Nation is rouſed, believe me ſhe can make Struggles that few have conceived, but which I ſhould be ſorry to ſee exerted on ſuch an Occaſion.

Whatever may be our Fate, I ſhall ever retain the ſtricteſt private Friendſhip for you and yours; but let me intreat you to recall all thoſe endearing Ties to to your Recollection.

I am with Affection and Eſteem, Dear Sir,
Your Obedient Servant.
GEORGE JOHNSTONE.

arrived off Sandy-Hook the 11th ult. and were ſtill there on the 28th; ſince which we have heard nothing further, that can be relied on. Five or ſix Britiſh veſſels fell into their Hands every day, amongſt them ſome privateers.

Capt. William Chambers, in the privateer ſloop Gayton of Jamaica, on the 16th inſtant, off Cape Pear, took the ſloop Chatham of this port, which had ſailed from hence the 13th for North-Carolina, and (after taking out what indico was on board) ordered her for Jamaica. On wedneſday laſt, the 19th, off Winyah bar, he decoyed two pilots (of the name of Tarbox) on board, pretending that his veſſel was a prize bound in to George-town: having gained ſome intelligence from them, he the ſame night ſent a boat in, and cut out the ſloop Little-Robert of this port, with a cargo on board from Martinique, which he alſo ordered for Jamaica. On thurſday morning he reſtored to the pilots their boat and negroes. At 20 at night he anchored off Spencer's inlet. On friday morning, while he lay at anchor, the Chatham again appeared, and anchored under his ſtern. About noon he gave her to his priſoners, and then weighed and ſtood off to the S.E. The Chatham came in the ſame evening. The people that came in her, have given us the above information, and alſo what follows, viz. That Chambers's veſſel was leaky, her maſt ſprung, and he had been obliged to heave 3 of his guns overboard, in the ſtorm of the 20th inſtent: that he came out about a month ago, for a three months cruize, from Jamaica; where, when he came away, all the men of war on the ſtation had been called in, and the inhabitants of the iſland employed in erecting works of defence, from ſome apprehenſions of an attack. That there were only tenders and privateers cruizing, and 7 of the latter were fitting out (none of more than 20 guns) purpoſely to cruize on this coaſt, one to be commanded by Capt. Charles Kelly, the other by one Murray, the laſt fitted out by Jews. That Chambers on his way had called at Providence, where he took Capt. Funck in a ſloop of this port: And that the ſcooner Hannah, Capt. Widger, of and for this port from Bourdeaux, with bale goods, was taken on the 9th inſtant, by the little Jamaica privateer ſcooner Revenge, Capt. Atkinſon, mentioned in our laſt.

Capt. Chambers appearing again on ſaturday morning to the ſouthward of the bar, ſtanding in for the light houſe, and afterwards to the eaſtward, the brig Fair American (unloaded but the evening before) commanded by Capt. Charles Morgan, was generouſly offered, to go in queſt of the privateer; by the evening ſhe was completely fitted; on ſunday morning ſhe was filled with volunteers, and fell down to Rebellion road, from whence ſhe proceeded to ſea very early on monday morning, againſt the tide, a heavy ſea, and a ſtrong eaſterly wind; but was obliged to put back the ſame day, having ſprung her foremaſt in the partners.

Capt. Hallot of the Snow Manon, arrived here laſt Saturday, in 44 days from Nantes, has brought neither papers or letters that contain any public intelligence. But, he informs us, That a ſquadron of Britiſh men of war, conſiſting of 12 ſail, had been met with, in the Channel, on the 18th of June: That there had been a moſt deſperate engagement, in the night of ſaid day, and in a calm in ſight of Admiral Biron's ſquadron, between a French frigate called La Belle Poulle, and an Engliſh frigate of equal force, which began in the evening and continued till midnight, when the Engliſh frigate ceaſed firing, and La Belle Poulle had loſt 47 men killed and 50 wounded, at which hour a breeze ſpringing up, two Engliſh ſhips from the fleet, came up to the aſſiſtance of the the diſabled one, and chaſed La Belle Poulle into Conquet, from whence ſhe afterwards got into Breſt: That a great number of frigates were alternately kept cruizing out of Breſt, for the protection of the trade of France with the United States of America, ſome of which had taken and ſent in 4 Britiſh privateers, fitted out at Gueriſey, the crews of two of which were committed to the gallies, as they could produce no commiſſions: That it was reported, Admiral Keppel was at St. Helen's with 30 ſail of men of war, who were expected to ſail from thence the 5th of July: That the Breſt fleet conſiſting of 35 ſail were expected to have put to ſea on the 6th: That there had not yet been any formal Declaration of War, either on the part of France or Great Britain; but every circumſtance evidenced its being inevitable and near, for, on the part of France, two large camps were formed on the ſea coaſts of Normandy and Britanny; and on the 5th of July, public notices had been affixed at the Exchange at Nantes, by the Intendant of the Marine, that the King's ſubjects might proceed to fit out privateers, and offering very liberal encouragement to thoſe who ſhould fit out ſhips of 110 feet keel and upwards.—Capt. Hallot alſo mentions the arrival of 14 American ſhips at Nantes, as he came out, but can give no further account of them.

The prime coſt of Britiſh goods, ſhipped from England, upon ſpeculation, to Philadelphia and New-York, ſince the commencement of the preſent year to the middle of May laſt. we are informed, amounted to no leſs a ſum than one million and two hundred thouſand pounds ſterling.

By Capt. Bethel, in 13 days from Bermuda, we learn, that Capt. Bridger Gutridge, ſailed upon a cruize from thence, on the 25th of laſt month, with his little fleet of privateers—himſelf in a new Virginia built boat, of 54 feet keel, and 14 guns, which he has called the "Rebels-Dread;" his brother William, in a brig of 16 guns; Capt. Buchannan in the ſloop Augur, of 12 guns, which he formerly commanded, and the ſloop Lilly, of four guns.

The Balahoo, a veſſel well known in the Weſt-Indies for many years paſt, on account of her faſt-ſailing, is now a Privateer out of Georgia, and has already taken a ſcooner and ſloop, laden with indico and naval ſtores for St. Auguſtine, which are ſent into Sunbury.

This day three northern mails are due.
